Excerpt from Notes on the Slave-Trade, With Remarks on the Measures Adopted for Its Suppression: To Which Are Added, a Few General Observations on Slavery, and the Prejudices of Race and Colour, as Affecting the Slave-Trade; And Some Suggestions on the Means by Which It May Be Checked It need scarcely be remarked how extremely different is the service performed by the Squadron from that of blockading. No blockade has been declared or notified of the ports of Africa, except on one occasion at Gallinas, when a partial blockade was imposed by Sir Charles Hotham on account of a breach of contract of the king. Possibly the slave-dealers found that for their illegal traffic the ports were, in fact, to a great extent, block aded, and their use of the term proves the efficacy of the Squadron. In Parliament the term, however, has become conventional. It only misleads those who are not con versant with the subject, and sometimes the press of foreign countries has been deceived by the misnomer. Athly, Great expense entirely thrown away, loss by mortality. From the language held...
