Bound for a distant clime, before the breeze She rides majestic on the foamy back Of the up-lifting billows; he, well-pleas'd, Still on her gazes, till where ocean blends With the blue ether, she becomes a speck, And gently gliding downwards, disappears. END OF BOOK VI. THE ROYAL MINSTREL. BOOK VII. THE ARGUMENT. David's morning song--his father's household arrive to join his standard at the cave of Adullam--he relates to Jesse what has happened to him since his flight from Gebeah--a dreadful storm--the prophet Gad, borne by the spirit of God in a whirlwind, visits David, warns him to depart to the forest of Hareth, and foretells his future prosperity--David harangues his troops--the three chief worthies of his band arrive with pitchers of water, drawn from the well of Bethlem, for which David had longed, and to obtain it they had broken through the host of the Philistines that lay before the city--he refuses to drink it, and pours it out on the rock an offering to God--Abialher rushes forward, and informs David that Saul has barbarously murdered his father, the high-priest, and all his house, for befriending him in his flight from Gebeah--he endeavours to comfort him, and sends him with his bands to the forest of Hareth--the princess Michal privately leaves...
