Meantime, let us not assume that just because these pioneer prophets in education make us painfully conscious of our limitations we are a cruel and merciless lot slaughtering the innocents when we should be producing the finest fruits of culture and learning. Let us not be too harsh in our judgments because there is yet to be developed a system of education in which a race of teachers can guarantee steady progress from the kindergarten to the academic degree. There are limitations. Some of these may be overcome; others will remain. A very brief analysis of the activities of the modern state in education will disclose a nation-wide movement to develop primary education. This nation-wide movement is based upon the universal belief that at least a limited amount of education is essential in laying a foundation for life and citizenship. This conviction as to...
