Excerpt from Some Extension Administrative Problems: July, 1928 That is why we have felt justified during the last year or two in urging the development of strong research, teaching, and extension departments in agricultural economics in all the States. We now have the economic information; we did not have 10 years ago. We are now in position to give the farmer the help along these lines he has been asking for from the outset. Our researches in economics, both of the States and Federal Government, are daily increasing our knowledge in these fields. It would seem that the time is here when we are ready to go forward strongly and confidently in the extension of economic information on a considerably larger scale than in the past and that by so doing we will in greatly increased measure give help to the farmer and his family.
