A Woodland Counting Book Bur Oak Book

By Claudia McGehee

University Of Iowa Press. Hardcover. Condition: New. 32 pages. Dimensions: 9.8in. x 8.8in. x 0.4in. Towering oak and hickory woodlands once fringed the tallgrass prairie of the Midwest. In a wondrous mixture of plant and animal life, big mammals like black bears and cougars thrived alongside gray foxes and ovenbirds. But as more people arrived, the woodlands, like the tallgrass prairie, were cleared with amazing speed. Now only small portions of this special habitat remain, and many of its animals and plants are endangered or extinct. Despite the great loss, many people are working to restore and enlarge what remains so that woodlands can continue to support a rich wildlife community. And so we can all enjoy a walk in the woods. A Woodland Counting Book helps children learn about the woodland family. From one splendid white oak to fifty busy carpenter ants, illustrator Claudia McGehee counts the wonders of the woodlands in this beautifully illustrated companion to her previous childrens book, A Tallgrass Prairie Alphabet. As she follows spring to summer to fall to winter, returning at the books end to springtime in one woodland community, McGehee introduces more than twenty species of plants and animals. From the white oaks...
