Excerpt: . . . then crossed Lake George, and encamped on the banks of the Hudson near Saratoga. Here his progress was checked by the Americans under General Gates; and after two severe actions, he was forced to surrender on the 17th of October, 1777. This event diffused an universal joy throughout the United States. The European nations, and France in particular, who from prejudice of envy, had so long been desirous of the downfall of British grandeur, received this news with open exultation. Indeed, several individuals in France had asserted themselves in favour of the Americans. A number of brave and experienced officers of the Irish brigade volunteered in the cause of the British Colonies, against the parent State; and even some of the young nobility of France were emulous to distinguish themselves on this occasion. The most conspicuous of these, were the Marquis de la Fayette; Rochambeau, who served in the army that acted against General Burgoyne; De Coudray, a French officer of rank and Baron St. Vary. By the assistance of these auxiliaries, the Americans daily improved in discipline, and the successful close of the campaign on the frontiers, cheered them with the most pleasing expectations respecting the issue of the war. , On the 6th of February, 1778, a treaty of alliance between France and America was signed by the contracting parties. Washington appointed a day for the whole army to celebrate this event, and it was observed with the greatest military pomp. In May,...
