Army Command and General Staff College, 1983. OCLC Number: (OCoLC)70222363 Subject: Armies -- Personnel management. Excerpt: . . . 1o73 Mideast War-The Reconstitition Process in the Israeli Army The Israeli Army consists of three elements; a small professional cadre of officers and NCO specialists; a large number of conscripts; and a trained civilian reserve expected to mobilize with-72 hours of notification. 1 In Octoher 1973, there were 11, 500 regular army officers and men; about 50, 000 conscripts in various stages of training; and 275, 000 army reservists, although about 35 percent of these reseritsts were women who were used for 2 non-combat duties. Israeli reservists, however, joined their own operational units upon mobilization instead of forming a manpower pool from which the standing army drew reinforcements. Some units were manned entirely by reservists while others were manned by reservists and 3 regulars. This section will examine unit reconstitution procedures in Israeli armored divisions during the 1973 Arab-Israeli War. Israeli armored divisions had three armord brigades of three armored battalions each, a headquarters company per battalion,...
