BookBaby, 2016. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. John Boles (1895-1969), the matinee idol of the early 30 s and first singing star of the talkies, is presented herewith in this long-overdue and first-ever pictorial book that will surely appeal to any fans who still remember him, with over 60 head-shots and stills never before published in one book, and to new fans who will be able to discern his singular magnetism and the effect he had on the movie-going public of his day. Everyone knew his name. This book covers John Boles from his musical triumphs in Desert Song and Rio Rita in 1929 to his resurgence as a star in the patriotic musical Thousands Cheer in 1943. In the years between, primarily under contract to Universal and Fox Studios, he appeared as romantic lead in numerous dramatic films, such as Back Street and Stella Dallas, causing women in the audience to swoon and dream. Boles did not possess the burning sexuality of the heartthrob that preceded him, Valentino, instead he was refined and comfortable in his vulnerable and charming masculinity. Perhaps more important, Boles looked approachable. John Boles was the most alluring star in the movies. His place in movie history is secured as being the first major singing star of the talkies. In 1927 he was discovered and brought to Hollywood by Gloria Swanson, who had seen him perform in the light opera, Kitty s Kisses in New York and offered him a contract to co-star in her new silent film, The Love of Sunya. Boles was already an accomplished singer, having studied with vocal coach Oscar Seagle in New York, as well as two years with famous operatic tenor, Jean de Reszke in France. In 1929, with the first sound version of Desert...
