Excerpt from Life and Confession of Sophia Hamilton, Who Was Tried, Condemned and Sentenced to Be Hung, at Montreal, L. C., On the 22d of January, 1845: For the Perpetration of the Most Shocking Murders and Daring Robberies Perhaps Recorded in the Annals of Crime Richard Jones, the father of the principal subject of this narrative, was the only son of a wealthy nobleman residing in Bristol, England, he had in the early part of his life received a classical education. But in consequence of the death of his mother, he of course got an uncontrolled career, which continued too long, until at length he became a disgust to his kind and loving father, whose admonitions he disregarded and whose precepts he trampled upon. At the age of twenty-four, he was a perfect sot, regardless of the kind counsel of his relatives; and at length his character became so disreputable that he was accused of almost every outrage perpetrated in the neighborhood in which he belonged. This preyed so much upon his aged father that he became ill, and it is thought by many it shortened his life. Richard had then attained the age of twenty-five, and seemed so deeply affected by the death of his father, that he promised amendment of conduct, so that his uncle took him as partner at the druggist business; but this was to no effect, for in a short time he sought every species of vice and wickedness, which the depravity of human nature could suggest. His uncle and he dissolved, and as he had considerable of the money that his father bequeathed to him, he soon found company to suit his purpose, and became...
