Excerpt from The Necessity and Progress of Civil Service Reform: An Address Delivered at the Annual Meeting of the National Civil-Service Reform League, December 12, 1894 Imagine, then, a bank the stockholders of which, many in number, are divided into two factions - let us call them the Jones party and the Smith party - who quarrel about some question of business policy, as, for instance, whether the bank is to issue currency or not. The Jones party is in control, but the Smith men persuade over to their side a sufficient number of Jones men to give them - the Smith men - a majority at the next stockholders meeting. Thus they succeed in getting the upper hand. They oust the old board of directors, and elect a new board consisting of Smith men. The new Smith board at once remove all the emeers, president, cashier, tellers, bookkeepers, and clerks down to the messenger boys the good and the bad alike - simply because they are Jones men, and fill their places forthwith with new per sons who are selected, not on...
