An Historical Account of the Expedition Against Sandusky in 1782: Under Colonel William Crawford

By C. W. Butterfield

Badgley Publishing Company. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 260 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.6in. During the American Revolution, British allied Indians of the Ohio Country ruthlessly attacked white settlements and lone settlers in the frontier areas of western Pennsylvania, what is now West Virginia and Kentucky. German Moravian missionaries, in an attempt to convert the heathen Indians to Christianity founded a village near the Tuscarawas River in Eastern Ohio which they named Gnadenhutten (German for huts of grace.) Here dwelt Indians from the Lenni Lenape or Delaware tribe that had converted to Christianity and were learning the white mans agricultural way of life. These Moravian Indians were neutral in the American Revolution, much to the disgust of their red brethren who had taken up villages along the Sandusky River, near their Wyandot allies. In March 1782, after the Moravian Indians heathen brothers along with other British allied Indians attacked settlements in western Pennsylvania, Militia Colonel David Williamson led a group of men to Gnadenhutten and massacred 96 peaceful, Christian men, women and children. Needless this barbarous act infuriated the red warriors of the Ohio Country and attacks along the frontier borders increased. The settlers clamored for an expedition...
