Excerpt: . . . that they thrive well along the entire of the northern coast, from Belfast to the Causeway. The Cavehill, however, a mountain, which, at a distance of about three miles from town, rises to the height of 1100 feet, holds out, on its heathery and uncultivated sides, richer attractions: -- And oft, with bolder wing, they soaring dare The purple heath, or where the wild thyme grows, And yellow load them with the luscious spoil. Thomson Spring. A glass bell, placed upon the top of the bee-box, or glass hive, for I know not which is the more proper term, is soon filled with honey. The comb is remarkable for its whiteness and transparency, and the honey seems to be of the finest and purest kind. Mr. Jacksons father has several glass hives of a similar construction, at Waterford; and has, on different occasions, obtained...
