FOREIGN CROPS AND MARKETS, VOL. 49: JULY 3, 1944 (CLASSIC REPRINT) (PAPERBACK)

Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Foreign Crops and Markets, Vol. 49: July 3, 1944 The most pertinent post-war question before the American cotton-growing industry today, perhaps, is that of competition with foreign production. What kind of competition will we encounter in foreign markets? How much cotton can foreign countries grow? What kind of cotton is it and what are the conditions under which it is grown and sold? Can we meet the price of foreign-grown cotton? Unless we compete successfully with the grower of other countries with regard to quality and price, we may never succeed in rebuilding our export trade. No matter how favorable international trade policies may be, competition as to quality and price will be a dominating factor in our export trade. There was a time when American cotton was about the only cotton totn had After the war, spinners will be able to buy cotton of about the same quality in several foreign countries. For many years the increase hproduc tion of foreign cotton was gradual md largely unnoticed. During the past 15 or 20 years, however, foreign produc tion has increased to the point where it is now a heal, as well as a poten tial, competitor. From my observa tions in cotton-growing countries throughout the world, I am convinced that the people of foreign countries know how to grow and sell cotton.
