What a short period in the annals of the world, and yet how fraught with changes for the fair region now known to the geographer as Beaver county. Where schools and churches, where mills and factories, farms and villages now abound, ninety years ago not even the vestige of a building was to be seen. The river had not been dammed or spanned; the precious coal bed had not been tapped, nor the fertile field cleared. Indeed, one grand unbroken forest stretched from one end of the county to the other, and instead of the civilized white man, the dusky Indian, the greedy wolf, the blood-thirsty panther, and the awkward bear, thinly populated its sombre hills and valleys. Yet it was by no means void of beauty, only that this beauty in many places was of a serious, almost austere character. Through the dense foliage of its giant trees, and the denser...
