Excerpt from The Sorrow of a Nation: A Sermon Preached in the College Chapel at Princeton, N. J., Sunday, September 25, 1881 William the Silent knew but few moments of agony after the bullets of Balthazar Gerard had entered his body. The second stab thrust by Francis Ravaillac into the heart of Henry IV. Of France. The most gal lant and loving heart of Christendom, and the king fell back dead. The aim of Booth, more deadly and more merciful than that of his successor, soon ended the life of President Lincoln. Dynamite in the hands of an accursed Nihilism mangles horribly the body, but soon releases the suffering soul of Alexander, Czar of Russia. But we turn our thoughts to eighty days of heroic suffering at Washington and Long Branch, to eighty days of ?uctuating hope, when some times our fears belied our hopes and our hopes in turn belied our fears, day by day the sorrow of the nation growing, struggling for relief in prayers to God offered on all altars, till the anguish on the heart of the whole people...
