Excerpt from Ontario Institution for the Education of the Blind, Brantford, Ont., Canada: Reports of Principal Dymond, Dr. W. C. Corson, Physician and Surgeon, and the Examiners, for the Year Ending September 30th, 1884 The pupil in question, a young man of 21, left the Institution two years ago. His earnings at first were small but sufficient for his personal wants, and after a time for a little more. His father was a farmer, whose means were almost exclusively represented by his farm stock, buildings and implements. Rejoicing last summer in a more than ordinary good harvest, the latter was suddenly deprived of nearly everything by fire. Friends and neighbors were kind and sympathetic, but the first person to come to the half-ruined man with pecuniary assistance was his blind son. By economy and self-denial the young man had in this short time saved nearly one hundred dollars, which he placed at his father's disposal, pledging at the same time his future savings until the old place should be itself again. A worthy act this on the part of the blind...
